

Daniel + Tyler

Hello,

Our journey together began in 2014, and since saying "I do" in 2019, we have spent the last decade building a life surrounded with friendship, laughter, and a shared vision for the future. We've been intentional about this time, focusing on establishing ourselves in our careers, traveling to new places, and soaking up every moment with our friends and family.

While we are proud of the life we've built, we know that our greatest adventure is still ahead. We are ready to be the parents who cheer the loudest in the bleachers, who spend rainy afternoons building fortresses out of couch cushions, and who provide a foundation of unconditional support and safety. Our promise is to honor your child's story with honesty and pride, ensuring they always know how deeply they are loved, not just by us, but by you and the entire community of family and friends waiting to welcome them home.

We love our life, but for us, the "best part" is still missing. We've built a home that is sturdy and full of warmth, and we've grown into a partnership that is a true sanctuary. Now, we are more than ready to turn all that love outward.

We aren't just looking to "start" a family; we are looking to share the beautiful world we've built. Our hearts are wide open, and we are ready to give our absolute all to your child, to be the parents who are there for every bedtime story, every skinned knee, and every milestone, big or small.

Our Commitment to Openness

We believe that a child can never have too many people to love them, and we view openness as a beautiful way to honor a child's heritage and identity. Our hearts are fully open to respecting whatever level of contact you choose, whether that involves regular updates and photos, annual visits, or a more private connection. We are committed to following your lead and building a relationship rooted in mutual respect and transparency. To us, openness means ensuring a child grows up knowing their story is one of profound love from two families, and we are ready to embrace that journey with grace and an open door.

DANIEL

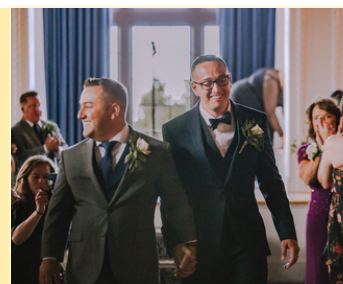

If I had to describe my approach to life in one phrase, it would be "all in." I've always been a naturally happy and optimistic person, and I bring that energy into everything I do, whether I'm tackling a new project at work or planning our next big family vacation. I'm incredibly determined; when I set my sights on a goal, I don't just "try," I commit fully until it's a reality. I want to bring that same dedication to fatherhood, being the kind of dad who is consistently present, engaged and ready to turn any ordinary day into a memory.

Beyond the energy and the drive, I carry a deep compassion for others. I've always felt a strong pull to care for those around me, and I pride myself on being a caring partner, son, and friend. For me, love isn't just a feeling; it's an action. It's about being the person who notices the small things and steps up before being asked. I am so ready to channel all that love and devotion into a child's life, to be their biggest cheerleader, their steady support, and the dad who loves them unconditionally, every single day.

TYLER

I've always been someone who believes that if a job is worth doing, it's worth doing with everything you've got. Whether it's navigating the challenges of my career or the intentional way Daniel and I have built our life together, I pride myself on being driven and determined. I'm not afraid of the hard work it takes to create a stable, beautiful environment, but I've also learned over the years that the most meaningful things in life can't be rushed. I've embraced a sense of patience, a "quiet strength," that allows me to stay grounded when things get chaotic and to truly listen when it matters most.

At my core, I am a caring and giving person who finds the most joy in showing up for the people I love. Whether it's being the steady hand for a friend in need or making sure our home is a sanctuary for our family (and our pups!), I lead with a loving heart. I am so ready to pour all of that energy into a child, to be the dad who is patient through the "why" phase, determined to help them reach their dreams, and always there with a warm hug and an open heart. I have so much love to give, and I can't wait to share that.

Meet Teddy and Sadie!

Our home is filled with the charm of two uniquely lovable personalities.

Teddy, our 9-year-old fireball, is the definition of "man's best friend." He is extremely active, lives for constant attention, and has never met a snuggle he didn't like. If there's a lap available, Teddy believes he will fit.

Then there's 8-year-old Sadie. We like to say she's actually a cat in a dog's body. She marches to the beat of her own drum, and in her world, naps aren't just a hobby - they're a lifestyle.

Despite their opposite vibes, they find common ground in the great outdoors. They both live for lounging on the patio, long walks, trips to the dog park, and the occasional cooling swim in the pond. As you can see from the photo of them completely tuckered out in the car, they definitely know how to play hard!

Home

We moved into our home in October 2023, and it has rapidly become our favorite spot. When we designed this house, we imagined a cozy and welcoming place that allowed us to host.

We immediately fell for a neighborhood that felt like a genuine sense of community. With sidewalks perfect for walks and plenty of families and children, there's a lively vibe that fills the air. Best of all, we are fortunate to live just a stone throw away from some of our closest friends and our cherished family - nieces and nephews.

WE LOOK FORWARD TO CONNECTING WITH YOU
