

SAI & MEAGHAN

Our Story

Our story is a love story that spans two countries – India and the United States. We have been married for six years. In that time, we have built a relationship built on patience, honesty, and lasting commitment.

Sai grew up in Hyderabad, India. He moved to the U.S. to pursue his master's degree in Data Science at SUNY Buffalo. Meaghan grew up in Maine and later earned her Master's in Healthcare Administration from Grand Canyon University. We met on a dating app. On our first date, we had dinner at an Indian restaurant. We shared a plate of biryani, Sai's favorite dish – and now one of ours too.

We lived in Boston during the 2020 pandemic. Then we moved to Ohio to be closer to Meaghan's parents and brother. Now we have a home full of family who love and support us. Both of our families are excited about our plan to adopt. They can't wait to meet our child.

We love to travel, and we can't wait to bring our child on future trips. After a lot of thought and hope, we believe adoption is the right path for us. We feel honored at the chance to become parents this way.

More About Us

We love spending time with family and friends. Sai's big family mostly lives in India. We visit them, and they visit us, regularly. Meaghan's family is smaller and lives close by, in Ohio and Indiana. We have people near and far who can't wait to meet our child.

We love hosting people in our home. When Sai's family visits, Meaghan cooks food everyone will enjoy, like Indian dishes and vegetarian meals. We also love the outdoors. Some of our favorite spots are Young's Dairy Farm and local state parks, where we hike, bike, and enjoy ice cream.

Our traditions mix both of our cultures. On birthdays, the birthday person picks where we go and what we eat for dinner and cake. We spend Thanksgiving and Christmas at Meaghan's parents' house. We also celebrate Hindu holidays like Diwali and Holi with trips to the temple, good food, and fireworks. Whether we're hosting a party or exploring somewhere new, we can't wait to bring a child into this happy life we've built.

What I love about Sai

Sai lights up around kids. His young cousins in India and Texas run to him the moment they see him. We always bring them gifts when we visit, and watching him get down on the floor to play with them melts my heart every time. I already know what kind of father he will be – patient, silly, and completely present.

Sai is brilliant and hardworking. He brings that same drive to his job as a computer scientist and to our life together at home. But what I love most is how he balances all that focus with pure goofiness. He can turn a rough day into one full of laughter, just by being himself.

Growing up in a big, close family in India shaped Sai into who he is. Family means everything to him. He is kind to strangers and generous with people who have less than we do. No matter what life throws at us, he stays calm and steady. I know that same steady love will be a gift to our child.

What I love about Meaghan

My wife is my best friend. Out of everyone in the world, she is the person I most want to talk to, laugh with, and come home to. She is sweet and patient, but what amazes me most is how she takes care of people. She notices what someone needs before they even say a word.

Meaghan does not give up. When she sets her mind on something, she sees it through, whether that means reading about 50 books a year or earning her second master's degree. I tease her that all the seafood she ate growing up in Maine made her such a brainiac.

She is also an amazing cook, and she has learned to make dishes from cultures all over the world, including mine. She has taken my Indian traditions and made them her own. Our home now celebrates both Christian and Hindu holidays, side by side. That is who she is – open, warm, and all in on the people she loves. I know she is going to be an incredible mother.

A Little About Milo & Our Home

Milo is our sweet, seventy-pound goofball. He's a six-year-old Chocolate Lab and Coonhound mix with soulful eyes and a tail that never stops wagging. Milo has a big heart and an even bigger love for his family.

Milo's favorite place in the world is the beach, where he digs happily in the sand for hours. He also loves his days at doggy daycare, playing and making friends with the other dogs there. He is gentle, loyal, and full of joy – and we know he is going to be the best furry big brother a child could ask for.

We built our home together in 2022, and we filled it with love from the very first day. It's a warm, welcoming house with four bedrooms and two and a half bathrooms, sitting on a quarter-acre of land in a friendly, family-oriented neighborhood. There is plenty of room to grow, plenty of space to play, and a big backyard for adventures with Milo. We can't wait to fill our home with a child's laughter and to watch them grow up surrounded by love, family, and – of course – a very happy dog by their side.

A Letter to Our Child's Birth Mother

We are holding you in our hearts with deep gratitude, just for considering us. We can only imagine the strength it takes to think about this decision, and we do not take it lightly.

If given this gift, we promise to raise your child with unconditional love, in a safe and happy home. Your child will always know their story – a story that includes you, your love, and your courage. We will surround them with a large circle of family and friends who will cherish them every single day.

We believe in honoring your connection to your child. We would love to stay in touch with you in whatever way feels right to you, whether that's letters, photos, or visits.

Thank you for taking the time to learn about us and to consider us. Whatever you decide, we wish you peace, and we are grateful for you.

With love and gratitude,
Meaghan & Sai

WE LOOK FORWARD TO CONNECTING WITH YOU
